Dear Sir:

With the slaughter on Virginia highways, it is certainly timely that some action be taken in order to relieve the Virginia motorist of the harassment and discrimination that is being practiced against him by the car and tire inspection law. The millions of dollars and hours that car inspection is costing the Virginia motorist each year, with no beneficial results relative to deaths, has proven to be an unjust and useless waste of time and money.

As an example of how unnecessary this law is, let us refer to our sister state to the North, Maryland, and to her highway statistics for the past two years. A lower percentage in their citizens have died on the state's highways than in Virginia. Maryland has no state car and tire inspection law of the nature of Virginia's.

Of the thousands of Virginia motorists contacted, it has been found that 97% of them are violently opposed to this obligatory car and tire inspection, especially since it has shown no beneficial results.

This issue is of more importance to a greater number of Virginia citizens than any other issue that has been brought out during the present campaign. Why has there been no mention of an issue that is so close to and involves so many Virginians in all walks of life?

Sincerely,
G.P. Brannan

TB Association Scholarships Train Nurses

Mrs. Betty Crandall and Mrs. Mary Franklin, two Lynchburg graduate nurses are attending a three - month post graduate course in inhalation therapy at the University of Virginia.

The nurses received scholarships from the Central Virginia Tuberculosis and Health Association to attend the course. The scholarships were made available following a recommendation from the Health Association's Medical Advisory Committee.

Dr. William H. Barney is chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Crandall, a Lynchburg General - Marshall Lodge Hospital nurse, and Mrs. Franklin a Virginia Baptist Hospital representative, were selected by a committee composed of members of Lynchbu.g Academy of Medicine and the administrators and nursing directors at the two hospitals.

During the intensive course, students will be instructed in many areas relating to diseases of the lungs and other aspects of respiration.

Especially stressed will be the care of patients with abnormal respiratory function, emergency resuscitation, care and maintenance of respiratory equipment, pulmonary function testing and the organization and operation of a hospital inhalation therapy service.

Completion of the course, according to Dr. Barney, will qualify students, after a period of in-service work, to take an examination for certification as registered inhalation therapists.

During the time the nurses are in Charlottesville, he said planning and study would be an important duty of the hospitals and physicians who will direct their work when they return. "Included are plans for several physicians to attend seminars and visit hospitals which have established departments of inhalation therapy and intensive care units for patients with respiratory failure," Dr. Barney noted. He said until departments of inhalation therapy are established, Mrs. Craddall and Mrs. Franklin will work under the supervision of physicians appointed by the medical staff and will have general supervision of oxygen administration and the use of other inhalation agents in the hospitals. "They also will direct pulmonary function studies which are used to evaluate breathing ability in both health and disease," he said.

The physician said more equipment is being added to the pulmonary function lab at Lynchburg General - Marshall Lodge. Also, he noted that a similar lab is being built at Virginia Baptist in the laboratory.

In explaining the need for nurses trained in respiratory techniques, Dr. Barney said, "certain diseases of the chest, led by emphysema, are the fastest growing medical problems today and improved facilities for testing lung function and treating these diseases is an absolute necessity."

He said the trainees will be used to instruct others in two Lynchburg hospitals and from the Southside Community Hospital in Farmville.

The Central Virginia Tuberculosis & Health Association serves Lynchburg and 11 counties in central Virginia, with headquarters at Farmville. Dr. Anthony Munoz of Farmville is president.

Fight tuberculosis, emphysema, air pollution.

The Pastor Speaks

THE MISSION VISION

Isaih 6:1

"In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord ---".

When Lord Tennyson was dying, friends at this bedside asked him "Is there anything you wish?" With a wistful, solomn reply, "yes, a new vision for God." This surely is a need of us all. We see great servants of the Lord dying and very few arising from the ranks to take their places. We see churches dying and very few to take their places. However, like Isaiah when King Uzziah died, if we but lift our eyes, we too will catch a vision of the one who thought He may sometimes seem to stand back in the shadows, is wisely directing all to a glorious end. Though important leaders pass from this scene of action, and institutions falter, we may be sure that God's truth will go marching on. For we have His promise that "the gates of hell shall not prevail against His church". When the great painter Leonard da Vinci finished painting "The Last Supper" he noted that people were so captivated by the picture in hand that they seemed oblivious to all else. Taking his brush he boldly wiped out the goblet that was getting all the attention. "Look at the Master's face" he cried. So, too, we are to lift up our eyes and let nothing interfere with that glorious vision of a soon coming Saviour. Let us do all that is within our power to get a vision of the needs of those around us. Let us do all that we can for Missions. Let us give until it feels good. Let us go forth with out the camp and serve Jesus. For He said, "Behold, I come quickly!". "The most powerful force on earth today is a cleansed soul on fire for God." "Give us the vision glorious, Of Jesus on His throne, Cleanse, energize and use us, And make us Thine own."

OUR GREATEST NEED

Lesson for October 26, 1969

Background Scripture: 2 Kings 18:1-8; 22 through 23; Jeremiah 25:1-7.
Devotional Reading: Psalms 85: 4-13.

The Pearly-Brite toothpaste commercial fades from the screen of your television set and is replaced by the face of an announcer. "Ladies and gentlemen," he says in solemn tones, "the program regularly scheduled for this time will be delayed so that we may bring you a special message from the President of the United States."

A picture of the White House with the words, "Washington, D. C.," appear in silence, hover uncertainly on the screen, and then dissolve into a picture of the President sitting at his desk. "My fellow Americans," he begins, "I want to take this opportunity to speak with you this evening on a matter that is of upmost importance to our nation -- every bit as important as our concern for foreign policy and military preparedness. I wish to discuss with you the moral and spiritual condition of these United States.

Whole-Hearted Return

"I have given long consideration and constant prayer to this matter and I have concluded that our beloved land is in desperate need of whole-hearted return to our religious roots and resources. Today the problems that face us and the danger that looms over us are largely the result of spiritual and moral decay.

He goes on, listing one by one, the evidences of this "spiritual and moral decay," including what he calls our "materialistic headlong pursuit of the Almighty Dollar," the loss of our "civic responsibility and Christian citizenship," and "ever-growing tolerance for dishonesty and hypocrisy, the perversion of justice, the exploitation of the poor, rampant racism, and our national preoccupation with sex."

When No One Cares!

"Worst of all," he continues, "the people of our nation have become largely indifferent to our moral decay and our spiritual decline. No one seems to care! Must we be humbled by our enemies before we will turn from this evil course? Must we fall victims to our foes before we stop trying to live as they do? I say to you that we need a new relationship with God. We need to renew and revitalize our churches. We need to reform our values and our practices. We need to remould our national life.

He pauses, then says, "I call you, my fellow Americans, to join me this Sunday morning in the church of your persuasion to bow your knees in humility and contrition before Almighty God, to seek his forgiveness, and rededicate yourselves to him in faithful, constant service. If we will do this, and do it with sincerity, and will continue to strive toward this end, we will not need fear for the security and future of this land. God bless you, and good night."

Of course, that address has never been given by a President of the United States, nor is it ever likely to be given. That would amount to "political suicide," and the air would be filled with cries for "impeachment." We like to think of ourselves as a God-fearing nation and want no one to spoil that illusion.

A Different Reform

What this "address" represents, of course, is the kind of which King Hezekiah brought to the nation of Judah when he assumed the throne in 715 B.C. His proposal for reform was just as startling then as it might be by our own Presidents today. The people were looking for a renewal of Judah's military might. This man, they said, to throw off the heavy hand of their oppressors.

But instead of coming to his people with a program to improve her military capacities, Hezekiah came calling for a reform of the nation's religious life. This, he said, was Judah's greatest need.

It need hardly come from the President of the United States, but are we any less in danger of moral decay today? Is not spiritual reform and renewal our greatest need too?

Band Plays In Charlottesville

They're off! Yes, the Appomattox High School Band left for the long anticipated trip to Charlottesville. They left in high spirits Saturday morning to take part in the 14th Annual Band Day celebration. Along with some twenty three hundred other participants they performed a very unforgettable halftime performance.

Along with participating in the half time activities they saw a very exciting football game between the University and North Carolina State.

On behalf of the band, we would like to thank everyone who made this trip possible.

Doctors Urged To Explain Fees

Robert C. Denzler, vice president and general manager of Blue Cross of Virginia and Blue Shield of Virginia, has urged physicians to undertake a comprehensive program to generate greater public appreciation of their roles and to correct any misunderstandings that may exists concerning fee structures.

Denzler told more than 200 physicians attending the annual meeting of the Medical Society of Virginia that in view of medical advances and the overall cost of living increases, it is necessary to create a more favorable public attitude toward their role in today's society, their charges for professional service, and toward the views of the Medical Society.

He pointed out that if "we don't tell the story clearly and accurately, someone will tell it for us ... possibly in a distorted manner."

Cleaner Air Week

Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr., has named the week of October 19-25, as Cleaner Air Week for the State of Virginia, saying that keeping air wholesome is a need affecting "every living thing."

"Nothing is more important in our lives than the air we breathe," Governor Godwn said. "It is a responsibility that touches every citizen, I call the observance of Cleaner Air Week, October 19-25, and its purpose to the attention of our people."

The Air Pollution Association and citizen agencies, such as the Tuberculosis - Respiratory Disease Associations are urging a personal responsibility approach to the pollution problems posed by home fires, leafburning and auto exhaust.

Dr. William H. Barney of Lynchburg, Chairman of the Respiratory Disease and Air Pollution Committee of the Central Virginia Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association is heading up the Association's "Cleaner Air" week campaign.
